I am indebted to the Social Science Research Council for a grant which allowed me to employ Miss Woolven and Mr Duncan for a two-year period. I am also indebted to the University of Warwick for a grant of £500 which allowed the work to be completed, if not 'on time', then very nearly.

In relation to a project which depended for its success upon the co-operation of so many individuals and institutions it may seem invidious to single out anyone for special mention. Yet it is surely proper that those who contributed time or learning or both, not to one or two items, but to whole classes of them or to the project as such, should receive some pride of place. Accordingly, thanks are particularly due to:

Professor George Bain for valuable advice and material encouragement: John Battye for exceptional generosity with time and learning: Dr Joyce Bellamy for allowing us to draw so freely upon the published and unpublished findings of the Dictionary of Labour Biography: Michael Brook for generosity with his knowledge and enthusiasm: David Englander for clearing up problems regarding housing journals and deposits in the Library of the London School of Economics: Hywel Francis for guiding us to items in the South Wales Miners' Library: Edmund Frow for acquainting us with the contents of his own remarkable collection and helping us with workshop papers; and to his wife, Ruth, for help and hospitality: John Halstead for detailed help on particular items as well as for an enlightened editorial policy in the Bulletin for the Society for the Study of Labour History: Else Hibburd for her partnership in preparing the original Harrison-Hibburd checklist: Deian R. Hopkin for his learning respecting the journals of the ILP: R. Mervyn Jones for help and advice with Welsh-language publications: Dr Henry Katz for particular help with respect to other non-English-language publications: J. Kinaken for his particular helpfulness about sailor's journals: Dr Tony Mason for sacrificing two weeks' sabbatical leave in order to allow us to clear up some 'ultimate questions': Jim Roche for co-operation with respect to several unique items in his collection: John B. Smethurst for similar services: Mary White for preparing the index: Special thanks to Mr H. O. Roth for assisting in checking the index and making a number of amendments.

It is also a pleasure to acknowledge the help of the following persons with respect to particular entries or classes of entry:

Dr Geoff Brown, Dr Alan Clinton, Roy Davies, Diana Dickson, Fred Donnelly, Janet Druker, Jim Epstein, W. Fishman, Brian Graham, Dr

Robert Grey, Dr W. A. Hampton, M. Harkin, Professor J. F. C. Harrison, P. Hay, Nick Howard, Dr R. Hyman, Charles McCarthy, Lionel Madden, John Mahon, Lawrence Marlow, Richard McKay, Victor E. Neuberg, R. G. Neville, A. S. Newens, Sir Frederic J. Osborn, A. J. Peacock, H. Pollins, Thomas W. Porter, Dr Richard Price, Raphael Samuel, Eric Shaw, Stan Shipley, Richard Storey, E. Taplin, Eric Tartakover, Dorothy Thompson, Gary Thorn, V. M. Thornes, Nigel Todd, Angela Tuckett, Bob Turner

The help of librarians and their staff in many public, university and specialised libraries has been indispensable. Particular thanks are due to our long-suffering friends in the British Library – both at Bloomsbury and at Colindale; to Bodley's librarian and his staff; to the librarian of Nuffield College who allowed Miss Woolven working space and a locker in the Library. The librarians of the Trades Union Congress, the Co-operative Union and the Labour Party endured innumerable interrogations and answered many requests with unfailing helpfulness and good humour. Librarians and staff at the Bishopsgate Institute, London, the Sheffield Public Library and Swansea University Library gave us exceptional assistance in terms of prompt and comprehensive replies to enquiries about unique holdings.

It is a pleasure to acknowledge the help of the following public libraries:

Altrincham, Avon County (Bristol), Barnet, Bebington, Belfast, Blackpool, Bolton, Bradford, Bromley, Buckhaven and Methil, Buckinghamshire, Bury, Calderdale, Cambridgeshire, Cardiff, Chelmsford, Cheshire, Cleveland, Clywyd, Colchester, Cornwall, Coventry, Croydon, Cumbria, Darlington, Derbyshire, Devon, Doncaster, Dorset, Dumbarton, Dundee, Dunfermline, Durham (Darlington), Durham, Dyfed, Ealing, East Sussex, Epsom, Esher, Essex, Gateshead, Glasgow (Mitchell Library), Hammersmith, Haringey, Havering, Hemel Hempstead, Hertfordshire, Hounslow, Ipswich, Islington, Keighley, Kensington and Chelsea, Kent, Kettering, Kirkless, Knowsley, Lambeth, Lancashire, Lancaster, Leamington, Leicestershire, Lewisham, Lincolnshire, Liverpool, Manchester, Merton, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, North Yorkshire, Northampton, Northumberland, Nottingham, Oldham, Oxford, Poole, Portsmouth, Preston, Reading, Richmond upon Thames, Rochdale, Sefton, Sheffield, Shoreditch, Somerset, Southampton, Southwark, Staffordshire, Stirling, Stockport, Stratford (London Borough of Newham), Surrey, Sutton, Tower Hamlets, Trafford, Wakefield, Waltham Forest, Wandsworth, Watford, Westminster, Weymouth, Wiltshire, Wirral, Wolverhampton

It is a pleasure to acknowledge the help of the following university libraries, specialised libraries and the libraries or research departments of the following organisations:

Aberdeen University Library, Amalgamated Union of Engineering Workers, Technical, Administrative and Supervisory Section, Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, Association of Acrobats, Association of Assistant Mistresses, Association of Broadcasting Staff, Association of First Division Civil Servants, First Division Association, Association of Government Supervisors and Radio Officers, Association of Her Majesty's Inspectors of Taxes, Association of Local Government Engineers and Surveyors, Associated Metalworkers' Society, Association of Officers of the Ministry of Labour, Association of Professional, Executive Clerical and Computer Staff, Association of Professional Scientists and Technologists Pharmaceutical Group, Bakers' Union, Birmingham Trades Council, Bishopsgate Foundation Librarian, Brighton, Hove and District Trades Council, Britannic Field Staff Association, British Actors' Equity Association, British Association of Colliery Management, British Council Staff Association, British Fire Services' Association, City Museum Bristol, Civil and Public Services Association – Newcastle Central Office Branch, Communist Party of Great Britain (James Klugmann, Betty Reid), Conservative Research Department, Co-operative College, Co-operative Societies: Ashton-under-Lyne, Bolton and Wigan, Bristol and Bath, Failsworth, Ipswich, Lancastria, Oxford, Perth and Swindon, Wollaston, Co-operative Union – Scottish Section, Cusworth Hall Museum, Deal and District Trades Council, Department of Health and Social Security Library, Derbyshire Area Trades Union Council, Economic League. Some respondents to our questionnaire failed to add a name and address. I apologise for not acknowledging them adequately. Equally, I ask all those who participated in the inaugural conference held at Warwick University in the summer of 1972 to forgive me for not mentioning each of them by name.

The responsibility for any errors or shortcomings in this Guide is shared by me with Mr Duncan and Miss Woolven. It does not extend to any of the individuals or institutions referred to above.

Introduction

This Guide has its origin in a suggestion which one of us made at the Inaugural Conference of the Society for the Study of Labour History held in London in May 1960. On that occasion it was argued that 'the "Labour" press was the one great institution of the British Working Class that had yet to find its historian'. Moreover, this institution was the one most likely to tempt the student beyond the limits of merely institutional history. Such an undertaking ought, so it was contended, to lead to a far closer approximation to the history of a class than would be the case with such other institutional starting points as parties, unions or co-operative societies. The preparation of a guide appeared as the indispensable preliminary to such a monumental task. The appearance of Mr Stanley Harrison's valuable Poor Men's Guardians (London 1947) has not diminished the force of the argument.

Assured of the support of the Social Science Research Council, we began with a conference held at the University of Warwick in mid-summer 1972. Here we enlisted the help of many high authorities on the history of this or that aspect of the Labour press. Their contributions enabled us to discern the balance that had to be struck between what we might hope to accomplish and what ideally needed to be done. In October of that year we set about consolidating everything that could be found in existing bibliographies. An unpublished listing prepared by Royden Harrison and Else Hibburd had already brought together the pioneering work of Foxwell, the important contribution of J. Brophy and of others. The invaluable work of J. Weiner, A Descriptive Finding List of Unstamped British Periodicals, 1830-1836 (London 1970) supplemented it. Then Professor Chimen Abramsky was persuaded to publish a rough check list of his own, which appeared in the Bulletin of the Society for the Study of Labour History, 26, (Oxford 1973). Members of the Society were invited to supplement it, although few proved able to do so.

The next stage was an attempt to comb books, articles and unpublished theses dealing with all aspects of British Labour History in search of every reference to periodicals. This large task was made all the more difficult by inadequate indexes and the occasional thesis which was unobtainable. We then examined existing bibliographical guides, notably the British Union Catalogue of Periodicals and Mitchell's Newspaper, Press Directory. There followed a search through the catalogue of the British Library and other major libraries in the hope of locating what we had already heard of and with the intention of catching the scent of what remained to be discovered. Finally, we had recourse to specialised appeals to particular groups and institutions. Questionnaires were devised for Trades Councils, University Extramural Departments, members of the National Union of Journalists, local Labour Parties, Trade Unions, Co-operative Societies, public libraries and other bodies. The extent of our success can be measured, if only approximately, by inspecting the list of persons and institutions which it has been our pleasure to acknowledge.

The reader will occasionally discover that volume and issue numbers are missing. This may be because no complete set can be traced, and it was not clear when the last issue appeared, or when the number and title changed. In some cases volume numbers were not used at certain periods in the life of a journal and sometimes volumes may be numbered but not individual issues. Upon occasion information was sent to us which was incomplete, or the periodical itself was not available and only incomplete information relating to it could be found in library catalogues.

It was not to be expected that we would personally examine every page of every issue of every run of a periodical in all the locations listed. However we have been depressed to discover how often the British Union Catalogue of Periodicals gave rise to hopes that were disappointed. Even if the holding was correctly described at the time of BUCOP's compilation, it was, at the time of our examinations missing or incomplete. Nor is BUCOP's listing exhaustive. Moreover, we discovered, to our dismay, that reprints published by reputable companies were sometimes imperfect. Accordingly, we tried to inspect personally at least one holding of every journal listed, even if this meant no more than establishing the presence of the first and the last issue. The holding so inspected is indicated by a dagger (†) and its type (original, reprint or photo-copy) identified. We remind the reader that our information was gathered between October 1972 and January 1975. Items may have been lost or misplaced or destroyed after those dates. Moreover, in a small minority of cases we have not managed to meet even this austere requirement. Time and money were exhausted before we could conduct a direct inspection. This applies, in particular, to the very numerous local journals produced by the National Association of Local Government Officers and to particular local publications linked by a syndicate as in the case of the Citizen or Voice 'papers. This matter of periodicals which we have not troubled to locate, introduces the more important question of what we were to do about ones which we were unable to locate even after diligent looking. Where we have strong reason to believe that such journals were actually published — and not merely projected — we have tended to include them. We have done so in the hope that other scholars may be alerted to their presence and succeed in tracking them down although we have failed to do so. Finally, a brief reference must be made to a small but important class of items where we have been denied the opportunity of checking out our entries. This refers particularly to the archive of the Independent Labour Party.

What has been said above should have sufficiently established the distinction between our check list and a bibliography properly so called. By a Check List we understand a mere alphabetically ordered listing of a particular class of publication: provisional in its extent and modest in the information which it carries about each item listed. In this case the usefulness of the list is somewhat enhanced by the addition of an index. It is by consulting the index that the reader may hope to discover 'Labour periodicals' associated with a particular period or place; occupation or calling; institution or ideological tendency.

The Standard Entry is, as indicated, austere. It normally contains nothing beyond the title, starting and finishing dates, the corresponding numbers and volumes, if any; an indication of the frequency of issue, the place of publication, if other than London; the price, the category in which it has been deemed to fall (see below), and a location or locations (subject to the qualifications referred to above). Sometimes, the reader may find rather more than this. For example, a note may be appended drawing attention to a periodical's affiliations, its publishers, its printers, editors or contributors. No attempt has been made to record the exact dates of any such associations; we have treated these annotations as mere 'acts of supererogation'.

By 'British' we refer to any Labour periodical published in the United Kingdom, or what is now the Irish Republic, irrespective of the language in which it appeared. Thus, we have tried to include not only journals published in Welsh, but others which were published during all or part of their lifetime in the United Kingdom so long as they had the required association with Labour. In addition, we have attempted to locate journals published outside the United Kingdom which appeared in English and which were connected with or directed towards British Labour.

By a Periodical we understand any paper, journal, commentary or record — whether printed or not — which was published with the evident intention that it should appear at regular intervals for an indefinite period of time (the length of the intended interval might change). We thus exclude as 'ephemera' all strike bulletins, election addresses or similar occasional appeals produced in response to what was seen as a passing occurrence. We have also excluded mere balance sheets or statistical returns appearing periodically.

By a Labour periodical we understand one which falls into one or other of the following three categories: First, one which was produced by an organised body consisting wholly or mainly of wage-earners or collectively dependent employees. Such periodicals which we deem to fall within this category are indicated by placing the letter 'A' at the beginning of an annotation. Thus we aspired to include all national, regional and pit or factory journals produced by trade unions. If periodicals produced by salaried employees were wholly or largely concerned with topics which might be the subject of collective bargaining these, too, were brought into our list. Our belief about the social character of the great majority of co-operative societies or working men's clubs led us to bring them in through this door.

Second, we tried to include all periodicals which were produced in the avowed interest of the working class — where that class was thought to have interests exclusive of the interests of other social classes or actively opposed to them. Although not necessarily produced by organised bodies of workers or collectively dependent employees, such periodicals present themselves as being 'on the side of Labour' as against Capital, or of the Employee as against the Employer. Items deemed to fall within this category are designated by the letter 'B' placed at the beginning of an annotation. Through this door we sought to admit all Communist, Socialist or Anarchist journals. The sharpness with which they identify with the 'proletariat' or recognise its involvement in a 'class struggle' varies greatly from case to case. We have tried not to be too exacting. Communist, Socialist, Syndicalist and Anarchist periodicals almost always incline to espouse the special interests of the working class, if only seen as those of the most long suffering or deserving class.

Third, we have thought it right to include within the community of 'Labour Periodicals' those which were produced for wage-earners by members of other social classes who sought to improve them, instruct them, or entertain them. Whereas our first category of 'Labour Periodical' was produced by the class and the second for the class in the sense of taking its side, this last group consisted of periodicals directed towards the working class with an eye to 'bettering' it from the stand-point of non-working class values. For two reasons the number of items brought into our list in this way is relatively small. It was not enough for us that a proprietor or editor was apparently aiming at a popular or plebeian audience: — we required that he should think of his readership as wage-earners. Further, we came to the conclusion that one of the leading forms taken by this type of periodical had already been the subject of adequate bibliographic description and that there was no point in repeating the references which can be found in British House Journals (1956) or in the Annual Press Directory (1846—). Nevertheless, a significant number of our entries fall into this category which is marked by the letter 'C' placed at the beginning of the annotation. In our opinion such periodicals are by no means necessarily barren ground in relation to the needs of the kind of social historian we have had in mind in preparing this Guide.

From the foregoing it will be apparent that this Guide does not attempt to direct the Labour or Social historian to all the periodical literature which may be of service to him. There is a vast and as yet unnumbered population of newspapers and journals which contain articles and reports of as much concern to him as anything included in our list. To take a leading example, Henry Mayhew's marvellous series of letters which appeared in the Morning Chronicle between 19 October 1849 and 12 December 1850 do not suffice to lift that paper into any of our categories. Nor is it enough for us that a paper should have been edited by acknowledged friends of Labour or by acknowledged Labour leaders to ensure its automatic inclusion in our Guide. Thus, we have not included the Barnsley Chronicle under Frost nor the Leamington Advertiser under Vincent since their editorial control did not prevent the papers from having the predominant characteristics of the conventional local or family journal. Of course, there were many local papers published in areas where proletarians were concentrated in large numbers which reported in depth on local Labour conditions and Labour Movements. Frequently such papers expressed a general sympathy and understanding of the claims of Labour. One recalls the Oldham Standard at least during the early years after its foundation in August 1859 when it still espoused the values associated with the names of Richard Oastler or J. R. Stephens. Papers that served coal mining communities, such as the Hamilton Advertiser or the Mexborough and Swinton Times, are further cases in point. Mitchell frequently referred to such publications as produced 'for or 'in the interests of the working classes'. On inspection most of these periodicals will be found to have appeared in the mid-Victorian period: to have been Liberal in their politics, never to have been owned or managed by wage-earners, and rarely to have articulated any conception of distinct working class interest opposed to those of other classes or seen to be clearly distinct from them. Nor did they address themselves to wage-earners as such, except incidentally or occasionally. The greater part of this population fits the account offered of them in Professor J. R. Vincent's Formation of the British Liberal Party 1857-1868 (revised edition 1976 Harvester Press, Hassocks) pp. 58-65. Accordingly, they fall outside our self-imposed terms of reference.

Of course, there are particular papers which have presented us with the greatest difficulty. For instance, we were tempted to include the Newcastle Weekly Chronicle for the years when it was controlled by Joseph Cowan. Its sympathy for craft unionism, co-operation, and working class self-help in general, recommended it. Moreover, the temper of its radicalism, even if middle class, went beyond that of the conventional Manchester School. Along with peace, retrenchment and reform, it advocated a particular form of class alliance linked to the claims of continental radicalism and nationalism. In the end we concluded that it failed to meet the requirements for inclusion in any of our three categories. This decision, like many others, will properly become the subject of debate. We will be content if our categories are clear enough to allow that the rules of the debate are not in doubt and the conclusion one which will be essentially dependent upon empirical considerations.

Rather than multiply particular instances of difficulty akin to that presented by the case of the Newcastle Weekly Chronicle, we prefer to identify three or four large problems. We believe that these large problems are all related to one another as manifestations of one master difficulty: that of doing justice to historical development. At the simplest level this 'master difficulty' is present when a periodical evolves from one of our categories to another. Thus to confine ourselves to two of the most famous Labour Papers: it is arguable that the Bee-Hive began in category 'A'. Then, under the Reverend Henry Solly in 1870-1 it passed into category 'C', until finally, under George Potter, it joined category 'B'. The Daily Herald began as a mix of 'A' and 'B': became predominantly 'A' before becoming a mix of 'B' and 'C'. We have not allowed ourselves to become too distressed by these complexities and we would be surprised if they delayed our readers for very long. We consider that only a small minority of our total entries were affected by such changes. We could hardly be expected to record every change in ownership or editorial style. In practice we have been content - in most cases - to try to determine predominant characteristics of our periodicals at the time of birth and of death without attempting to record all the vicissitudes that might have occurred between these two events.

A more interesting and important problem is presented by periodicals produced during the gestation of the British working class. We assume that this process was going on in England roughly between the years 1790 and 1832. We recognise that it occurred rather later in other parts of the United Kingdom. Moreover, we acknowledge that what happened in Ireland, Wales and Scotland ought not to be reduced to the model of the 'Making of the English Working Class' with no differences other than that the making tends to be deferred in these more backward countries!

So far as England is concerned, we have adopted a thoroughly 'Whiggish' solution. We have included those journals of 'the Democracy' which most clearly anticipated what were subsequently to become the characteristic demands of 'organised Labour. We have sought out the Jacobin, the ultra-radical and the ultra-democratic papers, while gratefully including such forerunners of our tradition as John Gast's Trade Newspaper which plainly belongs in our first category since it was managed by eleven delegates recruited from different trades. To the objection that the more temperate attitudes of other reforming journals might equally be seen as anticipating attitudes to be adopted by sections of the Labour world, we are content to reply that if these attitudes were shared with other classes and frequently more influential for being so shared, they were also necessarily less distinctive. But if we are pressed about the matter we will simply have to reply with the ad hominem argument that the periodicals we have listed are of the type which G. D. H. Cole or E. P. Thompson treated as formative and precursive of a distinct working class or Labour standpoint.

Despite the distance which we have just acknowledged between English experience and experience in the 'Celtic fringe', we believe that the same kind of solution is possible. With the help of our Irish, Scottish and Welsh friends we have tried to distinguish between those periodicals of the pre-proletarian world which anticipated the future of the British working class and those which were permanently locked within the terms of a rebellious, outcast, national, plebeian nonconformity. It is here that we are most conscious that we have displayed our ignorance while perhaps giving gravest offence. We can only add that, in this matter as in others, we will welcome correction.

Then there was a related problem which was hardly less difficult than the ones referred to above: what were we to do with periodicals related to institutions whose class significance changed over time? For instance, there is the problem of the infidel press. Nobody doubts that it played a great part in shaping working class consciousness at the beginning of the nineteenth century. Equally, nobody doubts that once it was transformed — during the mid-Victorian years — into the Secularist press it was frequently found in opposition to Labour movements. Our policy has been to seek out the infidel press while being much more sparing when it came to be an attack on God divorced from the defence of Labour. Periodicals which proclaimed disbelief or contempt for the Almighty were not admitted if they avowed their support for 'Labour' in the context of a mere eclectic jumble in which pacificism, vegetarianism, Humanism and the prevention of cruelty to animals were allowed admittance on the same terms as working men and women. This has meant that the anti-religious periodical has been more sympathetically considered in the early than in the late Victorian period. Nor has mere defiance of authority, whether in theory or in practice, been taken as a sufficient condition for inclusion at all times. To be 'unstamped' or 'underground' is not necessarily enough. Analogous difficulties arise in relation to the history of Mechanics Institutes or subsequent developments in the history of Workers' Educational Movements. Difficulties present themselves once more when it comes to the uncertain and changing frontier that divides genuine attempts at the foundation of producers' co-operatives from 'co-partnership' schemes. These generalisations do not exhaust the difficulties.

This Guide is a provisional check list, not a definitive bibliography. Our aim has been to provide historians with a tool of the trade, but we do not pretend that it is a precision instrument. It is our hope that those who use our Guide will nominate fresh entries: correct or update our information: and supply supplementary notes. If this is done then we may make our way, perhaps through the publication of supplementary lists, to a second edition which will be 'definitive'.

Yet we are confident that even in its present form our work will be found to have some usefulness for the student of particular places and periods, occupations or callings, institutions or ideological tendencies. We also consider that it will suggest questions which have been left unasked — as valuable a function in its way, as disclosing material which has been left unexamined.

Abbreviations

Most of the abbreviations in this Guide are taken from those used in the first volumes of the British Union Catalogue of Periodicals. (BUCOP). Abbreviations with an asterisk are our own inventions, not to be found in BUCOP but following BUCOP's conventions where appropriate. Thus in the statement on holdings we follow BUCOP i.e. a = first title and sequence of numbering, b = second title and sequence of numbering, etc.; i = first series, ii = second series, etc.

The reader should note that some abbreviations in BUCOP relate to institutions and libraries which may have changed their names since they were first listed and that public libraries have amended their titles after local government re-organization.

As explained in the Introduction, the archive of the Independent Labour Party was not open to public inspection while this Guide was being prepared, and is the subject of litigation as we go to press. The Warwick University (MRC) refers to the Modern Records Centre established in the University in October 1973. Its aim is to ensure the preservation and collection of primary sources for British Labour Social and Industrial History. A number of accessions of importance in this field have already been received by the Centre, and some periodical publications within these deposits are noted in the text. As the Centre has had only a brief existence it is not possible to list all runs of periodicals which have been included within the deposits there.

C 2d. Printed for the proprietors by Peter McCallum and Company. Published by the News Agents Publishing Company A full-size newspaper for master bakers and operatives. Trade news and general news. Reports meetings of the Master Bakers' Association, and the Amalgamated Society [of operative bakers]. The editor is independent but recommends the paper to the support of the Union. Lays open its columns to contributions from operative bakers and unions in the provinces. Advocates conciliation. In 1889 sub-titled: 'The only national weekly organ of baking trade recognised by employers and operatives'. In later years given over to trade interests, and no longer observes the separate identity of the operatives.

A 1d. An organ of the Shop Stewards' Committee, Thomas Firth and Son. Printer: Jas. Neville. Produced as an antidote to a house journal, it rapidly secured a wide circulation. In view of this the Sheffield Workers' Committee decided to launch another paper, the Sheffield Worker, which was suppressed after two issues. This led to a still stronger demand for the Firth Worker, but publication was prohibited by the authorities in July 1918. The tradition established by the Firth Worker and the Sheffield Worker was renewed after the war with the appearance of the Worker [1918? 19?].

B Editor: Henry Seymour. 'We have long believed that there would be found sooner or later, a single platform upon which all honest labour reformers could stand and work, and we claim to put forward a panacea which shall cement all movements having for their object the emancipation of the workman . . . We defy the whole troop of political economists, from Adam Smith to Karl Marx, to show that the exploitation of labour . . . is due to any other more primary cause than an inadequate method of exchange.' Advocates abolition of money monopoly by adoption of free currency. Sees need to abolish wage slavery completely.

Advocates the views of the Free Labour Society, 'which has the names of upwards of 14,000 workmen on its books, comprising no less than 154 different trades and callings'. The Journal was supported 'by some of the leading firms'. Against trade unions, and strikes. Addressed to working-men with the intention of persuading them of the benefits of eschewing trade-union organisation and making an individual contract with the employer.

A 'The Co-operator for August 15th, 1865, records still another attempt to establish a co-operative society to undertake printing and publishing. This attempt was made at Ashton-under-Lyne, and a prospectus was issued headed "Ashton-under-Lyne and Stalybridge Co-operative Newspaper and General Printing Company Limited". The capital was to be £1,500 in shares of £1 each. A paper, to be named the Independent, was to be published, and, in regard to matters political and theological, was to be strictly neutral. Whether the company ever reached the stage of registration or ever undertook business of any kind we do not know, as the available publications contain no further reference to it.' (F. B 1d.; 2d. First edited and published by W. Harrison Riley. Objects included universal suffrage, nationalisation of land etc., currency reform and liquidation of the National Debt. Riley hoped to make his journal 'the special organ of such societies as are not specially represented by the Beehive or the National Reformer'. Gave special notice to the International Working Men's Association, and in May 1872 declared itself the 'Official Organ of the British Section' of the Association, but did not long remain so. Riley appears to have given up the management of the paper, but resumed it again in May 1874. The Herald and Helpmate was the 'Official Organ of the Mutual Help Association', for promoting co-operative production and distribution in place of strikes.

B Gratis; ½d.; 1d. Labour Party. Local news, 'Jottings', women's column. Printed and published by the Co-operative Printing Society. Then, from No. 13, 6 April 1906 becomes Jarrow Labour Herald. This issue states 'the Jarrow Division Labour Herald has ceased to exist as the official organ of the Local Labour Party. It was freely distributed among the people for twelve months, and was kept going by the contributions, and the labour of working men and working women; but the burden was a heavy one, and the conference on March 24th decided to suspend production. We dare to affirm that the old Herald did useful work, and with many hold the opinion that there is a place in the public life of the district for a paper with a principle . . . The fact that we retain the title Labour Herald should give a fairly clear indication that the policy of the paper remains the same. But while that is so, and while we shall strongly support and advocate Independent Labour Representation, we will do our utmost to provide a newspaper in the real sense of the word.' Enlarged. Cadiz, one of the Jubilee directors, and was a lively periodical, which included Keir Hardie, Robert MacNish, . . . Thomas Ritchie, D. Thomson, William Barclay, J. Campsie, and James M'Aulay among its contributors. The league of Nations was one of the reforms advocated in its columns as a means of preventing war, while other proposals favoured included mines nationalisation, a Labour-Co-operative alliance, the amalgamation of neighbour societies in competing areas, the encouragement of co-operative production. Altogether, it was a commendable enterprise which led to the starting of the Scottish Co-operator in 1893. This is by Carl Grünberg, and appears as Hauptwerke des Sozialismus und der Sozialpolitik, Neue Folge, 5 Heft. See also R. Payne, Marx (1968), p. 158, where it is referred to as Kommunistische Zeitung. 'Engels was probably the editor of the newspaper, and he was certainly responsible for the longest and most comprehensive article 'The Prussian Diet and the Prussian Proletariat, together, with the proletariat throughout Germany' [translation of the original German title]. The phrase 'Proletarians of all lands, unite!' was first printed in this journal where it appeared on the masthead.' Printed for the proprietors by Meldolas Cahn and Company, London.

1777 Labourer's Herald: the Organ of the Federal Union of Agricultural and General labourers 1 (27 Nov. 1874)—7 (8 Jan. 1875). Maidstone; w

A 1d. Published and printed by W. R. and F. Masters. Important paper representing the interests of agricultural workers and others organised in the Federal Union, which claims to represent the whole of Labour, in a movement of general Unionism. The Federal Union encompassed '60—70,000 labourers in counties and towns of Surrey, Sussex, Kent, Hereford, Wilts., Norfolk, Suffolk, Boston (seceded), Yorkshire, Peterborough, Radnorshire, Breconshire, Gloucester, Bristol etc.' (No. 1). Incorporated with Kent Messenger.

A 'Issued for about a year. The editor who wrote more or less all of it was George Milligan, a docker and member of the National Union of Dock Labourers. It never became the official journal of the union and collapsed after a few months. It contained articles and poems written by Milligan, devoted to propagating the virtues of trade unionism; and general material on life at the docks. The articles contain a strong religious fervour as Milligan was a devout Catholic. Fortunately Milligan published a selection of material from the magazine in a book Life Through Labour's Eyes, 1911, my only source of information' (E. Taplin, letter).

B 5s. (No. 1), special price to Claimants Union members fixed by local unions. Reproduced from typewriting. 'As many editions shall appear as there is material, but hopefully not less than three monthly.' 'Aim of the Journal to broaden and push forward the horizons of the Claimant movement, to provide a theoretical forum for the whole movement, so that it may be united in a common understanding.' 'Editorial Control: the editor shall publish in full all matter sent to the Journal by Unions of the Federation' [ie not edited centrally]. Intention was to publish articles of a theoretical, descriptive and historical nature on the politics and organisation of Social Security, the Claimant Movement and all related matters. 'The approach will be outward looking rather than inward in order to establish the position of the Claimant Movement in working-class politics.' News and day-to-day material would be published in other NFCU or Claimants Union publications.

Prospectus of Newcastle Evening News Company announced 'This Company has been formed for the purpose of establishing an Evening Newspaper for the great Industrial Community of the North of England. The need for a journal which shall fully recognise and advocate the wants of the workers, while placing in the hands of the general public a thoroughly efficient Newspaper, is clearly apparent.' 'The provisional Directors were to include the President, the Secretary and the Assistant Secretary of the Newcastle Typographical Society, and another member of that body, W. F. Toynbee, was to be the secretary of the new company. Several officials of other trade unions were to be on the Board.' Arthur Henderson was also on the Board. (M. Milne, The Newspapers of Northumberland and Durham, 1971.) 'The lack of sympathetic treatment — indeed, the almost constant misrepresentation of the workers' aims by the ordinary press of the country, has emphasised the want of an outspoken mouthpiece as a vital necessity to the existence and well being of the cause of Labour Organization Prospectus). 115,000 copies of the first issue. In 1894 the paper was transferred to new proprietors, and became more moderate in tone, Lib.—Lab. rather than Labour, but in 1897 it became again more distinctly Labour. In 1896 the title was changed to Newcastle Daily News, but resumed its original title in October 1898. By 1899 another change had taken place: the paper was smaller, had a London address (the same address as the Morning Mail syndicate), had less local news and a 'stereotyped' appearance.

B 1d. First series printed by the Blackfriars Press for No More War International Movement, then No More War Movement (the British Section of the War Resisters' International). Editors: A. Fenner Brockway; W. J. Chamberlain; J. Allen Skinner. The 'Explorer' pages, for children, which were incorporated, were prepared by Theodora Wilson Wilson; these were dropped after April 1922 and replaced by a children's column. Left-wing sympathies; articles by Independent Labour Party members. Second series, I, 1–9, published by the Southern Counties Workers' Publications, Ltd. for the Movement, then printed and published by Lucking and Son. Editor: J. Allen Skinner. The leadership and the journal were socialist (see July and August 1935 where a complaint from a member that the assumption is made that all members are socialists is dealt with). No. I states 'In accordance with the decision of the Annual Conference of the No More War Movement, with this issue No More War becomes again the national organ of the Movement. The Midlands Council, who have been responsible for the production of the journal throughout the past year, have given every assistance in transferring its control to the National Executive.' Minnie Pallister, who edited the journal for the Midlands Council, agreed to serve on the new Editorial Board. See also New World; Points for Pacifists.

B Gratis; ½d. etc. Supports Labour Movement. In 1919 consists mainly of advertisements, but an occasional column of notes indicates its political attitude eg, 4 Feb. 1919 advocates trade unions' place in politics; 1 July 1919 supports rank and file in textile union in fight for improved union executive. Printed and published by John Howarth. By 1925 much more text, larger. Published by the proprietor H. Howarth. Contains serial story, 'Trade union topics', 'Labour sayings', series on the cotton industry with contribution by Charles Roden Buxton, and usual features of a newspaper. Continues commitment to Labour movement. By 1935 printed and published for the proprietor by 'The Padiham Advertiser', Ltd. Title extended to Padiham Advertiser, and West End (Burnley) Observer. Leader, 12 Jan. 1945, states 'We belong to that rather large minority of rank and file Labour men who would like to see the Communists, "Common Wealth", and any and every other "left" organisation incorporated in the Labour Party with full freedom to express their own particular views as to the best way to attain the Socialism we are all supposed to be striving for.' Less political comment in the 1960s, and latterly simply a local newspaper with no overt commitment to Labour. Published by C. L. Hargreaves (1970).

A 3d. Published by Eneas Mackenzie. Printed for the proprietors by William Lake, then by William George Graeme Ross. Published every Sunday. Home and foreign news, discussion of matters of concern to the Labour movement, details of meetings of Labour organisations in a column 'The people's societies', lectures, law notes, correspondence, reviews. For the furtherance of the popular cause. 'The efforts at co-operative production in 1820–1 and 1834 had not been supported by the typographical societies. In 1846, however, when the NTA [National Typographical Association] was collapsing amid widespread unemployment and strikes, many similar schemes were advocated in the Typographical Gazette, as a means of "employing the unemployed", and an alternative to useless expenditure on strikes and out-of-work benefit. The outcome of these various proposals for "co-operative printing offices", journeymen joint-stock "typographical companies", a "National Printing Office", or "National Press", was the establishment in London of the People's Newspaper, a weekly newspaper, the first number of which appeared on 30 May 1847. About twenty strike hands and fifteen out-of-work members were employed on this paper. Unfortunately, however, "the discontinuance of the London trade subscriptions, which were absolutely necessary for the continuance of the paper, rendered it impossible to proceed beyond the fifth number, and it was most reluctantly abandoned," after incurring a net loss of about £100. It was taken over by a typographical joint-stock company, which, however, was only able to survive by receiving “the loan of the strike hands of the Association upon credit”. The Delegate Meeting in August therefore decided to drop it. It had never received much support from the provinces, where many members objected to thy appropriation of Association funds, intended solely for trade-union purposes, to the establishment of a newspaper, “thereby bringing the employed into competition with the employer”.’ (A. E. Musson, The Typographical Association, Oxford University Press 1954, pp. 79–80.) There were several editions of each number.

C 2d. Published for the proprietors by Robert Banks (1—3), then by W. H. Guest (4—6). Edited by William Knighton. 'Progress owes its origin to a committee of working-men, who have determined to endeavour to place before the public a first-class magazine at so low a price that it may be within the reach of all. It is for all classes of readers and workers — whether they work by hand or head — from the crossing-sweeper to the cabinet minister. Its object is to find out the truth, and to describe it without fear or favour.' To assist understanding between capital and labour, to give help in social and economic science for the improvement of the homes and habits of the working classes; also, discussion, accounts of foreign lands, and lighter articles to enliven and amuse.

3068 St Cuthbert's Co-operative Association. Record [1877?] Edinburgh; m

A 'In the early years educational work was arranged by the board of management. Their work was restricted to occasional lectures. When the members decided, in 1877, that the time had come for the work to be done by a separate committee the board were none too pleased. That first educational committee was appointed with the specific task of publishing a monthly journal for the information of members. With a direct mandate from the members – and given £10 to spend for an experimental period of six months – they showed an independence which the board of management did not appreciate. The Record, as the monthly journal was called, contained criticisms which the management considered reflected upon their ability and were not in the best interests of the Association. A series of clashes resulted in the matter being placed before the quarterly meeting. There by a majority vote it was decided to cease publication of the Record (W. E. Lawson, One hundred Years of Co-operation: the History of St Cuthbert's Co-operative Association Ltd., 1859–1959, Manchester 1959, p. 65).

Later subtitled: ‘The Organ of the Secondary Education Association of Scotland’. ‘The Secondary School Journal, although published primarily in the interests of the Association of Teachers in the Secondary Schools of Scotland will, we venture to hope, be found to be of some service to those who are interested in the development of these schools and in Secondary Education generally. The principal aims of the Association as set forth in its constitution are the furtherance of the interests of Higher Education in Scotland, the promotion of union and intercourse among the teachers in Secondary Schools, and the better co-ordination of these schools with the Universities.’ Primarily concerned with professional and educational matters, but does cover conditions of employment like superannuation and salary agreement. In later numbers reflects the working of the Association towards union with other teachers’ associations to form the [new] Educational Institute of Scotland. Amalgamated with the Educational News and the Scottish Class Teacher.

B 1d. At first had similar aims to its predecessor, Irish Notes and Industrial News, ie the promotion of 'the Irish language and Industrial Revival movements', but in 1919 gives increasingly more coverage and support to the Labour Movement. On 21 March 1919 is started a column called 'The workers' forum' intended to be 'a series of sound, stimulative articles on Labour Organisation, and other matters of interest to the members of the Labour Movement'. More comment on trade unions, strikes etc. Letters on Socialism; contributions by workers and socialists. Its main support was for trade unions and co-operative enterprises. Towards the end, however, there is less 'Labour' content, and there is disapproval of the less than active support for temperance from the Labour Movement.

 B 1d. Publisher, editor and sole proprietor: Edward Richardson. 'This journal proclaims itself an Independent Organ on the side of the weak and poor; and all classes of working men are invited to peruse its columns and to promote its interests . . . The writer [Richardson] is known to many of the labourers of Bucks. and the adjoining counties, as having publicly proposed himself anxious to see the labourers better housed, better fed, better clothed, better educated, and better men. The motto of The Spade and Whip is "Reform".' Supports the agricultural labourers' movement, and 'the labour movement'. News and comment, and correspondence on the farmers' lock-out of 1874. No. 11 states that Richardson, 'who has long been known in this neighbourhood as the founder of the Labourers' Unions in Buckinghamshire', opened the meeting at the second anniversary of the formation of 'Local Unions', attended by members of Aylesbury district of the National Agricultural Labourers' Union. Promotes the enfranchisement of the agricultural labourer, and the exposure of grievances, whose corrective is 'The Labourers' Union, Temperance principles and Self-Reliance'.

B 1d. Printed and published for the proprietors by William Owen, and edited by him. (Owen was accepted in July 1886 as the Liberal candidate in the Ecclesall division, Sheffield.) 'Besides the potters, the miners, and the ironworkers, this paper will also represent the workmen of all classes in Staffordshire.' Says it will expose grievances, support trade combination, but also conciliation and arbitration, and friendly feelings between operative and employer. Includes trade union news, special articles on the pottery trade etc., serial story, home hints. By 1886 it is a Liberal weekly family paper with little in the way of Labour news, but in 1891 it claims to be the representative of the working-man. Succeeds The Potteries Examiner.

C ½d.; 1d. Owned and edited by C. Allen Clarke. Conscious intention not to set up the paper as an overtly political paper in opposition to existing Labour papers. Designed for amusement, 'to entertain and to teach the people'. Aimed at a working-class audience; sympathy with the 'poor, oppressed and miserable'. In favour of all movements that will remove suffering. In 1908 Clarke was calling himself an evolutionary socialist, seeing the goal in the distant future. Articles, including sketches of working conditions in Manchester industries, serial stories, children's corner, letters from readers, editorial chat.

C 1d. Printed and published by Francis Henry Parsons, Thomas Burrell and John Thomas O'Callaghan, at their printing works. Later published by F. H. Parsons, alone, then by M. Parsons for the proprietor. '... of somewhat better tone and character' than Town Talk and The Rag. 'An East-End local organ ... which, during 1886, dealt week after week with Post Office abuses. Toby was supposed to have some additional claim on the patronage of postal servants by its being edited by a man who had once been behind the scenes in the Post Office.' Included caricatures, and 'it was principally while the caricatures lasted to afford the amusement and excitement of guessing competitions among the sorters and letter-carriers of the General Post Office' that the paper flourished. (H. G. Swift, A History of Postal Agitation from eighty Years ago till the Present Day, New ed. Book 1, Manchester, London 1929, pp. 161—2.) No. 1 criticises the Poor Laws and those who administer them and similar officials in authority over the poor and powerless. Attacks by satire. For outdoor relief, reduction of poor rate by cutting salaries of those administering it, non-interference of Charity Organisation Society. Defends Post Office employees, 'the working classes of Government' and asks for better rewards and redress of wrongs. Reports proposals for reform of elementary education. Later in 1886 largely devoted to 'Can't think why', a series of scurrilous notes on unnamed individuals. By 1889 still in this vein, but editorials etc. are still attacking sweating, and conditions of Post Office Employees. Approbation for dockers in dock strike.

C 3d. Published by the Society for the Advancement of Political Knowledge. 'Edited by Claudius Verminus.' Consists of a 16-page leaflet on 'The evils of Communism. I'. Anti-communist and anti-socialist. The author says he is a worker himself, and opposes Communism as being based on force, and as being irreconcilable with the freedom of the individual. States that he is a clerk, the son of a journeyman tailor, self-educated, and has lived with workers all his life. Opposes the socialists in Great Britain as paying lip-service to the doctrines of communism which is a danger to the constitutional method of government. Was a 'sentimental socialist' himself when young, 'but contact with socialist leaders like Mr Fenner Brockway, the late Mr Ramsay MacDonald and others soon made me realise that I was not cut out for a Socialist', as he would not 'toe the party line'.

C 1d. Takes up the problem of finding work for educated ladies thrown on their own resources. 'The establishment of the Industrial and Educational Bureau from which this journal is to be published has revealed to us in a startling manner the perplexities of women who are left alone in the world, or who are dissatisfied with the monotony of an idle existence.' The paper is to be a record of industrial employments which those who want to work and those who can give it can alike consult, a reflexion of educational progress, and a compendium of miscellanea of special interest to the homekeeper and mother. 'A Special Committee will describe the various occupations in which women are engaged at home . . . we shall avoid party politics and controversial doctrines . . .'

NOTE

Workers' journals concerned with politics in the pre-Chartist period are described as 'democratic', while in the post-Chartist period, if they are not Socialist, Communist, Anarchist etc. they are described as radical.

The anti-religious literature before 1850 is described as infidel, whereas after 1850 it is referred to as secularist.
